 3. The allegations of Paragraph 3 of the Amended Complaint are denied.
 4. Scan Optics admits that it is a wholly owned subsidiary of Scan Optics, LLC.

Moreover, the allegations of Paragraph 13 of the Amended Complaint are not directed at Scan Optics, and therefore do not require a response. To the extent a response is required, Scan Optics has insufficient information to either admit or deny the allegations of Paragraph 13, and therefore denies the same.

47. Scan Optics incorporates, by reference, its responses to Paragraphs 1-46 of the Complaint as if set forth fully herein.

48. The allegations of Paragraph 48 of the Amended Complaint are denied.

49. The allegations of Paragraph 49 of the Amended Complaint are denied.

50. Scan Optics denies that it is obligated to Brainware in any amount.

51. Any allegation not expressly admitted herein is denied.

First Defense: Failure to State a Claim

Brainware has failed state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Second Defense: Lack of Mutual Assent

Scan Optics submits that there was no agreement as to the essential terms of any alleged agreement and there was therefore no mutual assent to the terms of such alleged agreement, and thus no valid agreement was formed. While expressly denying the existence of any contract, Scan Optics avers that Brainware presented Scan Optics with a draft form agreement, whereafter Brainware and Scan Optics negotiated modifications to that form agreement. Brainware thereafter induced Peter Moralee to sign the signature page of the agreement, to which the negotiated changes had not been made. The executed agreement therefore did not reflect mirror-image terms to which Scan Optics and Brainware mutually assented.

Third Defense: Fraudulent Inducement

While expressly denying the existence of any contract, Scan Optics avers that any alleged agreement between Scan Optics and Brainware is voidable by reason of fraud. In negotiating the alleged contractual terms, Brainware made intentional and/or negligent misrepresentations concerning material facts, for the purpose of securing the contract, which misrepresentations Scan Optics relied upon and which induced it to enter into the contract. Specifically, Brainware's agents, including Colin Kaye, made extensive misrepresentations, including, but not limited to, the nature and extent of professional services work available to Scan Optics if it entered into an agreement, sales leads that were available to Scan Optics through a lead generation system, and a formalized partner training program available and necessary to implement the Brainware software. Scan Optics relied on these misrepresentations. Any agreement which resulted from these misrepresentations should therefore be set aside.

Fourth Defense: First Material Breach

While expressly denying the existence of any contract, Scan Optics avers that if any alleged agreement between Scan Optics and Brainware was formed, Brainware's claim is barred by its own material breach of contract and failure to perform conditions precedent to Scan Optics' performance. Specifically, Brainware failed to provide the licenses and other software required by the agreement, failed to train Scan Optics and provide technical support as promised, and failed to provide sales leads as promised, causing Scan Optics to be unable to perform its obligations under any agreement between Scan Optics and Brainware.

Fifth Defense: Waiver and Estoppel

While expressly denying the existence of any contract, Scan Optics avers that if any alleged agreement between Scan Optics and Brainware was formed, Brainware's claim that Scan Optics breached a confidentiality provision in the alleged agreement is barred by the doctrines of waiver and estoppel. Brainware was aware that Scan Optics, LLC had information concerning Brainware. Brainware expressly or impliedly authorized Scan Optics, LLC to obtain such information and/or provided such information to Scan Optics, LLC, which information it now improperly alleges was disclosed in breach of Scan Optics' alleged confidentiality obligations. Moreover, Scan Optics relied upon Brainware's authorization of disclosure of such information. Brainware therefore waived any claim to breach of an alleged confidentiality provision and should be estopped from seeking to enforce the same.

Sixth Affirmative Defense: Estoppel

While expressly denying that Scan Optics is operated as the alter ego of Scan Optics, LLC and further denying that sufficient facts exist to warrant piercing Scan Optics's corporate veil, Scan Optics avers that any such claim by Brainware is barred by the doctrine of estoppel. Brainware knew or should have known the essential facts of the relationship between Scan Optics and Scan Optics, LLC and/or that Scan Optics, Ltd. was a wholly owned subsidiary of Scan Optics, LLC. Brainware chose to freely and voluntarily enter into an alleged agreement solely with Scan Optics. Brainware is therefore estopped to claim that either entity is the alter ego of the other.

WHEREFORE, having fully answered the Amended Complaint, Defendant Scan Optics, Ltd. requests that this matter against it be dismissed, together with costs incurred herein; and the award of such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.
